TO: CADETS OF THE 1961 FORT LEE ROTC CAMP

Like other elements of the Army, the Quartermaster Corps and Transportation Corps must rely upon an alert, well-trained, aggressive corps of reserve officers to augment their strength in times of national emergency.

Since the earliest days of the Continental Army, this nation has entrusted a significant share of the responsibility for its defense to its citizen soldiers. This system, an integral part in the framework of our governmental structure, is being continued in proud tradition by you men who have visited Fort Lee this summer.

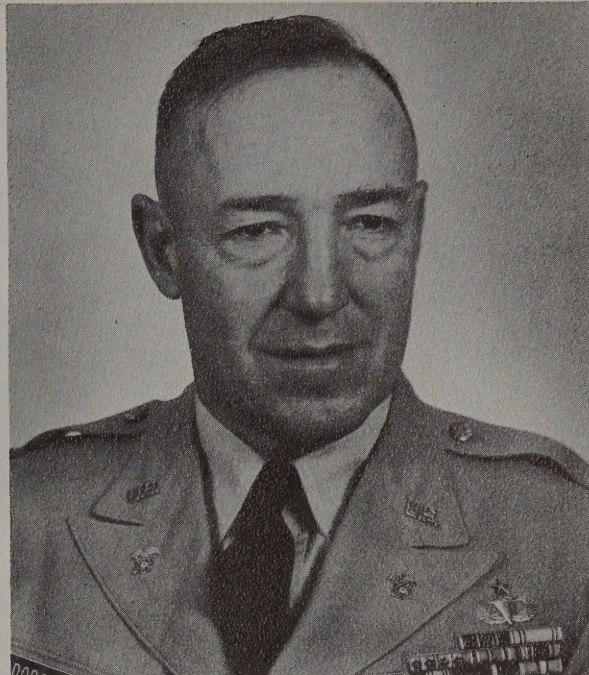

Whether you receive a Regular Army Commission or a commission in the United States Army Reserve, the training you have received here at summer encampment and at your respective colleges will constitute a fine background for your future military service. Because of the increasingly complex requirements of modern military technology, that training must be varied and condensed.

We at Fort Lee are proud to have played a part in the development of your Army training. May I extend my best wishes to each of you and sincere congratulations for a job well done.

ROTC Summer Camp

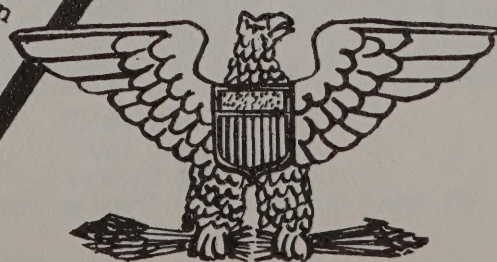

TO: CADETS OF THE 1961 FORT LEE ROTC CAMP

For 44 years the Army has been holding ROTC Summer Camps. The overall mission of providing experiences in the practical application of those military subjects taught at the college has not changed. The subjects, methods of doing things, and the tools with which to do them have, however, drastically changed in an attempt to keep abreast of the political, psychological, and scientific developments of the world.

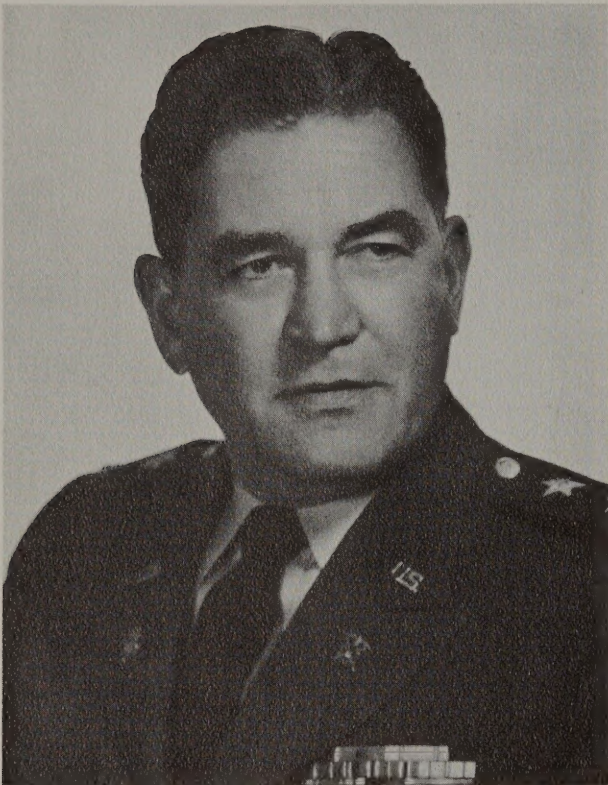

Many leaders have fallen to the belief that some device or technique has become the panacea of warfare. We must never cease in the search for new and better ways of deterring war through gaining "Power for Peace."

I am far richer in experience than can be measured since having worked with you in the 1961 Summer Camp. The course of instruction which you received was the result of many hours of planning and preparation. It was physically and mentally requiring and you proved your abilities. You are therefore to be congratulated for the manifestation of such perseverance and determination in the successful completion of the 1961 ROTC Summer Camp.
